USGA Green Section Record, July 17, 2015

What's New From The USGA Green Section

In the July 3, 2015 issue of the USGA Green Section Record, West Region agronomists provide regional updates on drought-affected courses, with observations being made throughout the West. Additionally, the effects of the California drought are becoming more apparent. As a result, some interesting observations have been made at drought-affected courses in the West Region. With the arrival of warm, summer temperatures and a mandate in California to reduce water use by 25 percent, the effects of the drought are becoming more apparent. As a result, some interesting observations have been made at drought-affected courses in the West Region.

Summer has arrived and the warm, wet weather is posing challenges for turf managers in the Northeast Region. Whether you are struggling with disease pressure or managing recently established turf in areas recovering from winter injury, this week's update offers helpful tips for success this summer.

Agronomists in the Southeast Region are working on best practices for turf managers. Whether they're in your home lawn or on the golf course, selecting the right time to harvest or mow is crucial. This week, the Southeast Region team highlights case studies from across the U.S. that showcase real-world solutions implemented by managers to improve the health of their greens.

Best Management Practice Case Studies Page

The USGA Green Section is divided into four regions staffed by agronomists who work with golf facilities on care of the golf course. USGA agronomists provide regular regional updates outlining current issues and observations from the field. Be sure to view updates from multiple regions as featured ideas, techniques and solutions to problems often apply to other parts of the country.

Regional Updates

In Case You Missed It

USGA Turfgrass and Environmental Research Online (TERO) | Rapid removal with SafeUnsubscribe

Course Consulting Service Information

USGA Privacy Policy

IMPORTANT LINKS

©2015 by United States Golf Association®