

Herbert H. Ramsay Becomes President of the United States Golf Association

At the annual meeting of the United States Golf Association held in January, 1931, Herbert H. Ramsay, of New York City, was elected as its president for the year 1931. Mr. Ramsay is a leading lawyer and business man of New York City. He graduated in 1905 from Phillips-Andover Academy in Massachusetts, where he was captain of the academy's golf team. He then entered Yale University, from which he graduated in 1908. He afterward graduated in law from New York University, and as a result of his subsequent brilliant career as a lawyer has earned the degrees of Ph. D., LL.D., and J. D. He was elected to the executive committee of the United States Golf Association in 1924, becoming its secretary, and later vice-president for several years. He has served in a highly efficient way as chairman of its principal committees, his last service as such being on the important Championship and Rules of Golf committees. His hard and useful work on the executive committee, with his unquestioned qualifications for president, made his election inevitable. His clubs are National Golf Links of America, Deepdale Golf Club, The Creek Club, Yale Club, Racquet and Tennis Clubs, Links Club, St. Anthony Club, Union League Club. He is vice-president of a large commercial corporation in New York City and director in a number of others. The Green Section, in common with golfing interests in general throughout the United States, is to be congratulated in having as its chief executive a man of such outstanding business qualifications and so devoted to the sport. In his address when elected president of the United States Golf Association, he said, "There is no more important work affecting the game of golf than that being carried on by the Green Section."

Ganson Depew, the new chairman of the executive committee of the Green Section

Ganson Depew Becomes Chairman of the Green Section

Ganson Depew, of Buffalo, New York, was appointed by President Ramsay as chairman of the executive committee of the United States Golf Association Green Section for 1931, having served as vice-chairman in 1930 under Chairman Vanderpool. Mr. Depew has always had a keen interest in turf development, having been for fourteen years chairman of the green committee of the Country Club of Buffalo. His activities in the business world, in the civic affairs of his home town, and in golf have been many and varied. He belongs to and has been president of many of the clubs and organizations in Buffalo and is an honorary member of many. He has been interested in the development of golf for more than thirty years. He helped organize the
