

Scholarships in Turf Management

The first two recipients of the Trans-Mississippi Golf Association's scholarships in turf management at Colorado A. and M. College are Wright Erwine, of Evanston, Ill., (left) and Bill Tavener, of Fort Collins, Colo., (third from left). Erwine is in uniform as a member of the Reserve Officers Training Corps. Seated with the two juniors are N. C. Morris, of Denver, Colo., (second from left) and Richard W. Braun (right), secretary-treasurer and director respectively of the Trans-Mississippi Golf Association.

Golf has been, as a whole, generous in contributing scholarships for deserving caddies.

The Trans-Mississippi Golf Association has now extended this principle and established two scholarships at Colorado A. and M. College, Fort Collins, Colo., for prospective golf-course superintendents. Golf funds so expended will thus go back into golf.

The first recipients are Wright Erwine, of Evanston, Ill., and Bill Tavener, of Fort Collins, Colo., a football star. Both boys are juniors and, in accordance with the terms of the gift, have completed two years of study in the College of Agriculture and have displayed an interest in turf management as a career.

The scholarship project was completed by John H. Butts, of Wichita, Kan., and N. C. Morris, of Denver, Colo., president and secretary-treasurer of the Trans-Mississippi Golf Association.

Each boy receives $300 this year, and, of course, the scholarship will be renewed for the next academic year if his achievement is satisfactory. The Trans-Mississippi Golf Association also hopes to establish two additional scholarships at Colorado A. and M. College next year, so that in future years it will be aiding two juniors and two seniors simultaneously.

Scholarship, character, personality and interest in turf technology are the bases of selection for these turf scholarships. The selection is made by the scholarship awards committee of Colorado A. and M. College in consultation with the scholarship committee of the Trans-Mississippi Golf Association.
