Ah, California!

A correspondent in California who has made the game his hobby writes: "Lightning is still an infrequent occurrence in sunny California, where we play. It is designed to save the greens and to spare the hazards.

Other Side of Etiquette

The Etiquette of the Game is a in the Rules of Golf is concerned with relations of players to each other and the course. The official advice under such circumstances is to take shelter. "In the particular section of California," a correspondent writes, "lightning is still an infrequent occurrence in sunny California, where we play. It is designed to save the greens and to spare the hazards.
