

Cover Photo:
While orange barrels draw contempt on our highways, it is conceded that progress has a price. In a like manner, putting green aerification will cause some short-term disruption, but that price is worth the long-term benefits.

Even though these trees are low-growing, the view to the green of this par-3 hole is extremely limited due to their presence. See page 8.

PHOTO COURTESY AURORA C.C., ILLINOIS

Using the best quality irrigation water is good for the golf course and good for nature. See page 15.

1
Orange Barrels and Putting Green Aerification

Progress has a price.
By R. A. (Bob) Brame

5
Confused About Weather Station ET?
Perhaps You Should Be

ET and crop coefficient data from various weather stations are not interchangeable.
By Dr. Paul W. Brown

8
Check The View From The Back
Evaluation of a maturing golf course starts from the back tees.
By Darin Bevard

11
For Richer, For Poa
Cultivar development of greens-type Poa annua.
By Dr. David R. Huff

15
Maintain The Best Irrigation Water Quality On The Golf Course
Consider the use of a floating intake structure.
By Miles M. (Bud) Smart, Ph.D.

17
News Notes

18
Green Section Educational Program: Experience Spoken Here

19
1999 National and Regional Conferences

20
The Seven Dirty Words of Golf Course Maintenance
Watch your language!
By Patrick Gross

22
Turf Twisters